The Columbus Association for the Performing Arts
A non-profit, award-winning presenter of national and international performing arts and entertainment, the Columbus Association for the Performing Arts (CAPA) was founded in 1969 in an effort to save the Ohio Theatre (a 1928 movie house and now the State Theatre of Ohio). Over nearly 50 years, CAPA has become a cultural anchor for the Columbus community with an estimated annual economic impact exceeding $70 million.

CAPA’s mission is to
- Present and produce artistic programming of the highest quality to serve and educate diverse audiences and feature renowned artists of all cultures
- Operate and maintain world-class performance venues
- Strengthen our arts communities by providing facilities for resident companies and through partnership and collaboration, support those organizations, and
- Bolster the economies of the downtown communities we serve.

CAPA serves as a theatre owner/landlord, presenter of performing arts, shared services manager, theater-based community developer, and fundraiser.

CAPA owns and operates the Ohio Theatre (2,791 seats), Palace Theatre (2,837), and Southern Theatre (925), manages the Riffe Center Theatre Complex (1,377 total), Lincoln Theatre (582), and McCoy Center for the Arts (786), and subleases the Drexel Theatre (cinemas). With a combined capacity over 10,000 seats, CAPA welcomes more than 530,000 patrons to over 700 events each year.

CAPA is a complex organization, operating through several partnerships and business entities with an overall budget typically exceeding $23 million and a core operating budget over $16 million. Approximately 77 percent of consolidated earned revenues (and 85 percent of core revenues) are earned through ticket sales, rental activity, shared services, and ancillary income, with the balance from individual and corporate donors, government support, and foundation grants. CAPA’s most recent balance sheet shows assets in excess of $65 million.

CAPA’s self-presented programming includes a feature series of about 30 events (supported in part by a partnership with Broadway in Columbus), an educational series of five shows, and America’s longest-running classical film series each summer featuring.

about 30 films in less than 10 weeks. CAPA is the exclusive producer of the free, two-day Festival Latino, the largest Hispanic event in the State attracting crowds of over 200,000.

The President and CEO

A forward-thinking, energetic and visionary professional, the CAPA President and CEO has overall accountability, responsibility and authority for the leadership of CAPA. This individual reports to the CAPA Board of Trustees and provides overall leadership to a six-person, senior executive team as well as the Executive Director of the Shubert Theater in New Haven, Connecticut. The CEO acts in accordance with the strategic objectives and direction developed with the Board. This individual also ensures CAPA’s activities, including financial, operational, fundraising, marketing, human resource, technology, and programs are effectively implemented across all components of the organization.

The President and CEO empowers all CAPA staff including 100 full-time and 340 part-time or temporary employees, and over 700 volunteers. The CEO is an effective communicator who will guide CAPA through strategic planning and support organizational and staff development as it continues to evolve.

Today, CAPA operates in part through partnerships and the President and CEO enables its partners and shared services program organizations to thrive. CAPA has 20 resident arts groups and robust shared services agreements with seven local organizations and the Shubert Theatre. The President and CEO also currently serves as the executive leader of multiple organizations to which CAPA provides shared services. While the nature and extent of services provided differs for each partner, CAPA serves as a strong advocate for its partner organizations and the entire arts ecosystem of Columbus.

A champion of the arts in Columbus, the CEO balances the needs of CAPA and numerous partners and stakeholders and embraces inclusivity by engaging the broader community.
